The Department of Homeland Security has alerted the nation that Domestic Violent Extremism (DVE) is the #1 threat we face. The complex and evolving DVE threat far exceeds our local capability, requiring a 'whole community' public health approach to prevention.

Participants in the DVE track will learn about the spectrum of prevention, intervention, and disruption strategies and capabilities they can implement, including how to:

- conduct a behavioral threat assessment
- police violent extremism
- leverage multiple violence prevention options, including gun violence restraining orders
